

Stop asking your parents for a timeline.

“What’s the hardest decision you ever made that nobody saw you make?”

Then follow the thread, gently,
three times:

What would have happened if you'd gone
the other way?

Who did you talk to about it, or did you carry it on your own?

Do you still think you got it right?

Chronology tells you what your parent did.

Choice tells you who they are, and what it cost them.

The full guide this question comes from.
